New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, June 21.—It took several hours of waiting tactics on the part of the professional element amongst the operators in stocks to demonstrate to-day their satisfaction that the sharp fail in prices last week had not attracted any demand sufficient to form a basis for a renewed upturn in prices. The smash which followed was more severe than on last Thursday, Seiling was almost as constrained during the early part of the day as was buying, with duliness and listlessness as have not been seen for weeks in the trading.

Attempts were perceptible in some quarters to inaugurate a rise in prices, but the handful of stocks selected were almost alone in the movement, which was feeble and ineffective. Heavy individual seiling orders appeared first in one stock and then in another. The source of this liquidation was such as to suggest the closing out of some accounts that have figured conspicuously in the prolonged campaign for the rise, and this suggestion made a strong sentimental effect on the tone of the speculation, and encouraged the professional bear element to renew their aggressive operations by short selling and offering down of prices.

The bears still found effective ma

The bears still found effective ma The bears still found effective material for influencing sentiment in the fears of bear effects to follow the failure to secure admission for the United States Steel stocks to the Paris Bourse. The direct opposition between the reports said to be received by private bankers regarding the standing of the plan and the assertions of the banking interests concerned did not prevent the reports of the failure of the project from hurting values, Wahash a Mysiery.

Selling of United States Steel also carried the impression of liquidation of some important individual accounts. The same appearance in the Wahash securities served to throw suspicion on the active advance which has been effected in those stocks on vague intimations of important developments said to be pending, but which have entirely failed of authentic confirmation.

The mystery surrounding the Wa-

The mystery surrounding the Wabash movement has also been a source of growing apprehension amongst speculative followers of the movement for days past, and when enormous blocks were sold to-day by houses which were most active in accumulating the stock while the advance was in progress it was argued that an unfavorable turn must have occurred in the movement. Amalgamated Copper also proved Manigamated Copper also proved acutely weak, and the overspeculation abroad in coppers left the reaction ary tendency there still'in force. The progress of the decline brought out added efforts on the part of the bears shown by their raiding tactics and by the circulation of unfounded rumors. One of these was to the effect that E. H. Harriman had suffered a sudden and fatal selzure in Vienna. This rumor was put out late in the session of the stock market? and was not traceable to any authoritative source, but it proved extremely effective notwithstanding the prompt discredit thrown upon it by Union Pacific officials, who would expect to have immediate advice of any hapnening to the head of the system, owing to the frequency of cable communication from the traveler with his business associates.

Sharp Railles.

The sharp railles which followed the successive drops were evidence of the part played by short selling in the market. This rule did not apply, however, to the final break, in which the Harriman stocks played the principal part, the selling movement being still in active progress when the trading ended. A rally of a point in Southern Pacific was the only notable indication of a check to the movement.

Pacific was the only notable indication of a check to the movement.

Careful observers of the market were much inclined to lay stress on the last week's break in prices in prompting demands for a broadening of margins and even probably an absolute reduction of loans outstanding on stockholdings.
